Excerpt: . . . the guineas which they represented. They would therefore be exchanged for Bank of England notes until they were of the same value. The Bank of England is the great regulator of the country paper. When they increase or decrease the amount of their notes, the country banks do the same; and in no case can country banks add to the general circulation unless the Bank of England shall have previously increased the amount of their notes. It is contended, that the rate of interest, and not the price of gold or silver bullion, is the criterion by which we may always They might, on some occasions, displace Bank of England notes, but that consideration does not affect the question which we are now discussing. corresponding fall in the prices judge of the abundance of paper money; that if it were too abundant, interest would...
