C. : Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology, 1999 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)52526153 Subject: Military research -- United States. Excerpt: . . . HAPTER VERVIEW OF C 2: O DARPA DARPA was established as an agency within the Department of Defense, in response to the Soviet Unions launch of Sputnik, for the purpose of initiating unique research and development programs in often high-risk areas, that would, if successful, offer significant impact on the Departments military capabilities. The goal of these efforts is to help maintain U. S. military technological superiority and to guard against unforeseen advances by potential adversaries. DARPA responds to tasks and guidance from the Office of the Secretary of Defense to establish an independent research agenda that is relevant to national security needs. DARPA is an idea agency, able to reach beyond todays technological frontier to develop what is needed by Americas military in the future. Based on its mission, DARPA focuses on revolutionary initiatives with high technical risks-a mission that differs from the typically evolutionary efforts appropriate to the research and development programs of the individual military Services. DARPA has been uniquely positioned to address technology developments that cut across all the Services or respond to joint-Service needs within the Department of Defense. The Service research and development establishments provide focused technology solutions that are driven by specific Service requirements. The Service laboratories also provide a path by which to transition DARPA-developed technologies for insertion into military systems. Together DARPA and the Service research and development communities provide DoD with both radical and incremental approaches required for defense innovation. Figure 1 compares the different roles of DARPA and the Service laboratories. The culture at...
