Seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, grade: 1, 7, University of Mannheim, course: The New Woman in American Short Fiction, language: English, abstract: Fumiko Enchi has worked on Onnazaka for eight years, which has been translated to English under the title of The Waiting Years. The novelist-critic Takami Jun describes it as a rare jewel among masterpieces of modern literature. The novel reveals how the family system of Meiji Japan (1868-1912) leads to an exploitation of the women and treats various problems which the protagonist Tomo Shirakawa faces. The role of the concubines provides a profound double structure. The novel is a fictional transformation of Enchi's grandmother Ines painful life who endured a polygynous marriage with a man from a samurai family. During that time women were resisting the government to reintroduce the traditional Japanese family system. Enchi published several critical novels in the late 1960s criticizing the patriarchal social order. The novel won the Noma Literary Prize, one of Japan's most prestigious literary awards. Usually the prize is only given to one work, but in 1957 it was awarded jointly to this novel and to Uno Chiyos Ohan, which glorifies women's submissiveness to her husband as a true feminine virtue. To understand the situation of Japanese women during the Meiji period it is necessary to analyze men's behavior and to reveal the political and historical background. Therefore,...
